HE TAKES EVERYTHING BARBER SHOP OFFERS EVEN TO PALM READING

(BY AL WARDEN)

The man from Iowa who confided to a clerk at one of the local hotels the other day that he thought Rex Leach was a summer resort, was out-freaked, outclassed, left, groggy and bawling on the ropes yesterday by a man from Iron county, our own state.

He wandered into one of the local barber shops with the rust of iron county still clinging to his boots, with a willingness to be shown anything new in the tonsorial craft and a week's growth of stout alfalfa stubble on his chin.

Up to the town, which is some town, he had everything a minute ahead in barber conveniences, he confided to "Slim," to whom he entrusted the task of revealing his features once more.

"Yes, shree! Hot and cold water, running, towels 'n' everything."

TAKES IN EVERYTHING.—He took down near every sort of treatment "Slim" had to offer and came back strong at the end of each round. It was one of those rainy afternoons and he couldn't think of a better place to pass it than in a barber's chair.

"Have you any baseball stars in this here?" chirped the man from Iron county.

"I'll say we have," replied "Slim."

"Well, you know we have a team down home that could wallop any team Ty Cobb ever saw. I tell ye it is some team, and the way the boys slap out the home runs is something high short of marvelous. They hit 'em like slugs of the Ruth type, and boy—they do travel."

"And you know baseball is a mere side issue. We have a mit slinger down there that has anything in this neck of the country, he's a mile. He sure swings a wicked left. Talk about yer Dempsey's, say this kid has a wallop that would have put old Jess out in one round."

"But Dempsey is heavyweight titleholder," betters "Slim."

"That makes no difference. This kid only weighs 158 pounds, but man, he carries the most wicked uppercut you ever saw framed. Why, I really believe he could defeat Jack Johnson if the two were to meet."

If you want to hear the latest chatter, the barber shop is the place. And arguments, say you could tell a bird that you could still purchase a pair of kicks for eighteen iron men and he would laugh at you.

Birds like the gent from Iron county are every day visitors. Some of 'em are men who don't give a dern for a dime. Yep, they even get their shoes shined.

And this Iron County chap—"when a pretty manicurist took her seat at the side of a customer next chair over, the chap was moved to curiosity and later to remark."

ANOTHER CHANCE.—What's the young woman charge for fortune telling? Darned, if I don't want the whole treatment, no matter what it costs.

Hand-holding will be the next step to perfection in the barber parlors of the city. Some of the shops have even gone so far as to purchase talking machines to entertain the customers during their spare minutes in the tonsorial palaces. Perhaps the next step will be to engage "shimmy" dancers and the like to add a little jazz to the occasion.

Little Joe, the bootblack was one of the first entertainers to seek a position in the parlors. But since Joe has been on the job he has seen many other stunts come and go.

"Dance mases, keen at holding hands, would aid any shop," say the wise ones.

And so with all of the changes and the like in the barber shop world, fortune telling may be adopted as a part of barber college curriculum, but the idea is young, even for 1921, says Slim, who ought to know, for he's been in the barber business ever since shaving became as common as Saturday night. And on top of this the gent from Iron county seconded the motion—and putting one and one together—well they undoubtedly are right.

If you don't believe it, try a hand hold, or a fortune telling bee, and perhaps you will agree.

INVESTIGATE BUREAU SAYS

Local Farm Organization Calls Farmers' Attention to New Sugar Factory

Suggestion that farmers interested in the recently organized Pioneer Sugar company investigate the matter thoroughly, is contained in the following statement, appearing in the current issue of the Weber County Farm Bureau News Bulletin.

The Pioneer Sugar company, which was recently organized by the farmers of Salt Lake county, Cache county, and Utah county, plan to purchase the sugar factory at Hooper. We understand that the organization and stockholders are to be strictly farmers. The plan is for each beet grower to supply the stock in proportion to the number of acres of beets grown. Representatives of this company are now in Weber county trying to sell stock in this company to our local farmers. In our opinion, before the farmer should obligate himself by taking stock in this enterprise, he should stop, consider, and investigate.

Is it a practical proposition for farmers to operate a sugar factory?

Who are the men promoting the enterprise?

Specific information on the transfer and sale of the Hooper Sugar company to the Pioneer Sugar company, the present owners of the factory.

The proposed contracts and agreements covering purchase of factory by farmers should be known.

What are the charges for promoting?

What kind of a contract will the growers be required to sign for a long period of time?

Arrangements for operating and financing?

The purchase and operation of a sugar factory by the farmers of this state may be a good proposition, not only to give the beet grower all of the profits above operating cost, but information on manufacture of sugar can be had by the farmers from their own laboratories. That is provided, the beet grower and efficient operation can be had. The farmer is a producer and has had very little experience managing an enterprise as large as this. Consequently unusual precautions should be taken to make it a success.

CLUB DISCUSSES HEALTH OF CITY

Civic League Hears Government Agent on Rodent Control; Seek Garbage System

Plans for an anti-rodent campaign in Ogden were discussed by the members of the Civic League, Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Joseph Wintle, B. R. Richards, government agent directing anti-rodent campaign, gave a brief talk on the rat pest. He stated that rats could not be eradicated while they were so generally fed, and that the only way to cut off the food supply was the careful attention to garbage collection and disposal.

Rats multiply at the rate of a million per year. The first thing to be done in a rodent campaign is to cut their food supply. This will tend to lessen and diminish their number, he said.

Mayor Frank Francis, said that he realized the importance of a garbage system, but he estimated the cost of such a movement would reach into fifteen and may be twenty thousand dollars. He stated that the city was willing to do more than its share, but is not able to do much owing to the inadequate finances.

The members of the Civic League are not easily suppressed. Mrs. A. W. Agnew, the secretary said. The league will pursue this question until something is done to relieve the situation. Ogden City is in need of, and should have under municipal control, a system of collecting and disposing of garbage.

"So long as garbage is thrown into back yards and dumped upon streets, just so long will Ogden remain in an unsanitary condition, the health of her citizens be jeopardized and the rats continue to multiply."

"Let us arouse ourselves and display some civic pride. Every woman and child should feel sufficiently interested to do all within his or her power to bring about sanitary conditions."

"Instead of the annual cleanup in the spring let us endeavor to be clean all the year and thus make our little city a safe place in which to live."

Health depends upon cleanliness. Cleanliness is next to Godliness.

Department of Farm Bureau Planned

Organization of a fruit department of the Weber county farm bureau will be held at a meeting of orchardists at the county farm bureau building, Thursday, February 11, at 8 o'clock, according to W. P. Thomas, county agricultural agent.

A similar department will be organized by the State farm bureau in Salt Lake City February 11.

Representatives and delegates of the farm bureaus of the county have extended invitations to attend the meeting, and orchardists of the county who are interested in the organization are urged to be present.

JUNIOR HIGH IN COUNTY LIKELY

Board of Education May Take Up Proposal; Treasurer Is Appointed

Harold Campbell of North Ogden, treasurer of the Ogden State bank, was appointed treasurer of the Weber board of education at the regular board meeting yesterday.

The matter of the appointment of a clerk held the attention of the board for some time, but no choice was made and the matter was postponed for later action.

Petitions from school patrons, and delegations from different sections asking consideration in the matter of more building room were read. Due to rapid growth in some portions of the county and also for need of providing more adequate high school education the county board of education is confronted with the necessity of building several new school houses in the immediate future. It was brought out by Superintendent B. A. Fowler that junior high school units would most likely be organized, and proper buildings provided on that plan. The tax-payers of the district will undoubtedly be consulted in this matter, he said.

Make Canvass of County Farm Bureau

P. Thomas, county agricultural agent, and the Ellen Agren, county farm bureau director, will start on a canvass of local farm bureaus throughout the county during the week.

The object of this canvass is to confer with the representatives of the various bureaus, in the men and women's department, for the purpose of outlining work for the coming year.

Outlines of projects are being formulated by each local bureau, and the plan of planning the year's work has been found to be the most practical in other years.
